Science Geo Camp

Six students from our school, along with five from four other schools attended the science Geocamp recently. Rachel Cox, Aysha Barrett, Nataliah Kingi, Tamati Wharerau, Liathano Morris and Cassidy Foster and pictured below. They spent two weeks visiting various sites of interest around the Far North, including Henderson Bay, Karikari Peninsula, Coopers Beach, Broadwood, Ahipara and Waipapakauri Beaches. They discussed the features, took samples of water, soil and rocks and then analysed them in a make-shift lab at REAP. GNS – formerly known as the Institute of Geological & Nuclear Sciences, sent scientists, most of whom are based in Wellington, who guided the students through tasks and discussion, made them think about what evidence we had discovered and the children acted like real scientists. All this exploration and discussion led to groups of children creating their own presentations. These were displayed at the Te Ahu Centre and opened to the public. The students explained what their presentations were about and the Mayor John Carter came to see them. They all really enjoyed the experience so hopefully it will inspire them or others to become scientists.

Promotion for Warren

Our teacher aide Warren Whareaitu was promoted to Squadron Leader last week ATC 64 Squadron. His wife Joan and a fellow officer place his new rank slides on his shirt. Unit Commander Whareaitu was humble accepting his new promotion. There are only 2 Squadron Leaders in Northland.
